The El Capitan Theatre Hollywood - El Capitan Theatre is a landmark 'movie palace' in Hollywood that features exhibits and stage shows along with the latest Disney movie screenings. It is a fully restored movie palace originally built in the 1920s by real estate developers Charles Toberman and Sid Grauman, also the builders of Hollywood's Egyptian & Chinese theatres. Stars of the stage attended the opening of the El Capitan Theatre, the largest legitimate theatre in Hollywood in 1926, filling the 1,550-seat theatre dubbed "Hollywood's First Home of Spoken Drama".

In 1941, the El Capitan Theatre was converted from a playhouse to a movie theatre. Searching for a theatre in Hollywood to premiere his controversial film, CITIZEN KANE, Orson Welles rented the El Capitan. In 1941, Welles' first feature film, CITIZEN KANE, premiered at the El Capitan Theatre. In 1989, the Walt Disney Company joined forces with Pacific Theatres and launched a restoration of The El Capitan, achieving the goal to recreate the original 1926 look and feel including original design elements such as the ornate plasterwork and the opera boxes in the main auditorium. The theatre reopened its doors for the world premiere of THE ROCKETEER, becoming the first of many Walt Disney Pictures feature films to premiere at the El Capitan Theatre.
